SERGEANT EDWARD HINMAN

INTRODUCTION

Believing it to be their duty to their descendants, the seven sons of Abner Hinman II, have caused to be compiled and issued, this record of the descendants in direct line from Sergeant Edward Hinman, the Pilgrim, to their father, Abner II. This has been accomplished at the cost of much time and some expense, but is not issued with the object of financial gain; but for the sole purpose of producing an authentic record of the Hinmans to date, and of the kindred families to the point of their junction with the Hinmans, in so far as we have been able to obtain authentic data in that respect; all to be handed down to future generations, that those yet to come may more readily gather the strands here necessarily laid down and be able more easily to keep their family record complete.

This production is, therefore, not placed on sale, is not copyrighted, but is issued only with the above intentions, and only for gratuitous distribution among the seven sons of Abner Hinman II and Emma Shaw Hinman, his wife, and their descendants.

We desire to acknowledge our profound obligation to Royal R. Hinman, whose able work, "Catalogue of the First Puritan Settlers of the Colony of Connecticut," issued in 1856, has furnished us absolutely authentic data covering the period down to the beginning of the nineteenth century. From that point on to the present the line has been completed by data kindly furnished by old people of the family, who gladly live again the years of the past, mentally renew the associations of their younger days, and from the brightest spots in memory, glean a splendid heritage, to pass it on down the generations to those who in their turn shall follow them.

Royal R. Hinman⁶ (Gen. Ephriam⁵, David⁴, Benjamin, Jr.³, Benjamin Sr.², Sergeant Edward¹), to whose work above mentioned we are so deeply indebted, was a man of superior attainments. He graduated at Yale College in the class of 1804, with John C. Calhoun, Henry R. Storrs, Dr. John Pierpont, and others of that prominent class. He studied law and was admitted to the bar in Connecticut in 1807 and practiced in Roxbury and Southington. While in the latter place he served as Judge and Clerk of Probate, and was for ten years Postmaster at Roxbury, and Magistrate twenty-five years. In 1819 he was Major and Inspector of the Sixth Brigade of Infantry of Connecticut. For four sessions he was a member of the General Assembly of the State. He was a member of several college societies, an original member of the Connecticut Historical Society, honorary member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, New Jersey Historical Society, Pennsylvania Historical Society, and the Iowa Historic Society. In 1835 he was elected Secretary of State of Connecticut, being re-elected seven years in succession thereafter. He was Collector of Customs for the Port of New Haven in 1844, a member of the National Convention in Baltimore the same year. About that time he was nominated by the President of the United States for Postmaster at Hartford and rejected by the Senate for being neither a Van Buren nor Clay adherent. He also held various other positions of honor and trust under the legislature of Connecticut in revising the public statutes and acts of incorporation of that State. He wrote quite extensively of the early history of his State and its Puritan settlers, beside various other historical works. He afterwards removed to New York City where, we believe, he died.

In his work, "Catalogue of the First Puritan Settlers of the Colony of Connecticut," page 884, he says:

"Descendants usually have some curiosity to know the size, general appearance, stature, color of eyes, and complexion of their first ancestors in this country. As no portrait is found of Sergeant Edward Hinman, they are left to depend on tradition for these facts. He was about six feet in height, with light, large eyes, and muscular in frame, having been an officer was straight in person, with an easy movement. The black eyes, now so frequent in the family, have crept in through the numerous wives connected with his descendants. Many stories are related of the great muscular powers, not only of Sergeant Edward, of Stratford, but of several of his early descendants. Those of the name were uniformly of a light complexion, tall in person, and in advanced life became corpulent."

In the same work, page 809: "The name of Hinman is found in England, Ireland, and Scotland; also in Germany, ending in two n's—Hinmann. If the name was originally spelled with an H, it is difficult to determine whether they were Scotch, German, or English, as it is not a frequent name in either country. Lower, in his book of surnames, gives the origin of Hinman and Inman, where the H is considered only as a cockney prefix."

"The coats-of-arms for Inman and Hinman in Berry's Heraldry, which is infallable, and in a book of crests found in some libraries, one of which is in the Congressional Library at Washington, shows the two names to have originally been the same name, with or without the H prefix."

"Coat-of-Arms of Inman, by Burke, viz., Vert. on chev. or., three roses gu. slipped and leaved of the first. Crest—On a mount vert a wivern ppr. ducally gorged and lined or."

In the preparation of this work, we have stood by the graves of our ancestors, and, with fast-beating hearts, contemplated the past, with its wealth of character. And now, with eager eyes turning to the future and "as the long train of ages glides away," may the family, generation after generation, be true to the sacred trust enjoined upon them to preserve and perpetuate the names and records of a worthy ancestry, and may they hold in their highest esteem the splendid heritage of a direct lineal blood descent from the Pilgrim and the Revolutionary fathers. May they be not unmindful of the sterling characters and goodly lives that have preceded them, and may their lives be such as to warrant prima facie their claim to membership in such a family.

THE SEVENTH SON.

THE HINMANS

SERGEANT EDWARD HINMAN was the first and only emigrant of the name found in America. He first appeared in Stratford, Connecticut. The exact time of his arrival there cannot be ascertained, as the first ten years of the record at Stratford was destroyed by fire about 1649. The year of his arrival was about 1650, or before. A tradition has come down from the earliest days in New England, in fact, from Sergeant Edward himself, that he had belonged to, and constituted one of the body-guard of King Charles I of England, as Sergeant-at-Arms, and that he escaped in the days of Oliver Cromwell, the Protector, to save his life from the halter, as Cromwell's vengeance was wreaked upon all such as favored the Crown. This, if true, proves Sergeant Edward to have been a most trustworthy loyalist and an honest man, for no others could have received the confidence of the throne at that critical period of the British government. As he held the title of Sergeant from his first settlement at Stratford, he probably acquired this title from his service in the life-guard of the King. Many of his descendants have since been prompted by a military spirit and fondness of military glory, there having been thirteen by the name of Hinman from the town of Woodbury, Conn., who held military or naval commissions in the war of the Revolution.

Soon after settling in Stratford, Sergeant Edward had a house-lot, which is recorded and described in the "Stratford Records, 19th of 9th month, 1668." Royal R. Hinman, in his work of 1856, says:

"This house of Sergeant Edward was located upon the west of the present Main street in Stratford, a little southwest of that noble old Episcopal Church, the beauty of which is its antiquated structure and plainness." At a town meeting on March 7, 1654, and again on February 2, 1664, various pieces of land were assigned to him by division of the town lands. The records also show where he purchased lands at different times. While at Stratford, he was a farmer and extensive land holder and was accounted a man of good judgment. He was the first owner of the old tide-mill between Stratford and what is now Bridgeport, and some of his descendants have owned and been concerned in milling since. Sergeant Edward's ear mark for his cattle was recorded at Stratford, "the 18th day, 9th month, 1662," viz., "a slit right down the first q'r of the off ear, and a little slit across the upper side of the same ear." His son, Edward, Jr., took his father's ear-mark September 25, 1698.

Soon after coming to Stratford, Sergeant Edward married Hannah, daughter of Francis and Sarah Stiles, of Windsor. The time of the marriage is not found. It was probably in 1651 or 1652, as his first child was born in 1653.

Sergeant Edward sold his homestead in Stratford in 1681 to Richard Bryan, of Milford, and about this time made his will at Woodbury, in which he calls himself of Woodbury. He died November 26, 1681. It is supposed he died at Stratford, as his will was proved and his estate settled in the probate court at Fairfield, in 1682, where his will is recorded, and in which he remembered each of his children and directed that his youngest son, Edward, Jr., be brought up to a trade with Jehial Preston, of Stratford. He might, however, have died at Woodbury, as Woodbury was then part of Fairfield county. His grave is not found either in Stratford or Woodbury, but his death is recorded in Stratford.

Sergeant Edward was a man of pure character, and was noted for his integrity and strict honesty in all his dealings in life. This has been characteristic of most of his descendants. No one of the name has ever been publicly punished for an offence, however many may have deserved it.

Sergeant Edward's children, born in Stratford, were: (1) Sarah, b. Sept. 10, 1653, m. Wm. Roberts, of Stratford. (2) Titus, b. June, 1655, settled in Woodbury. (3) Samuel, b. 1658, settled in Woodbury. (4) Benjamin, b. Feb., 1662-3, settled in Woodbury. (5) Hannah, b. July 15, 1666. (6) Mary, b. 1668. (7) Patience, b. 1670, m. John Burroughs on Jan. 10, 1694. (8) EDWARD, JR., b. 1672.

EDWARD HINMAN, JR., fourth and youngest son of Sergeant Edward Hinman, of Stratford, was born at Stratford in 1672 and was the only son of Sergeant Edward to settle at Stratford with his father. In accordance with his father's last will and testament he was brought up to a trade by Jehial Preston, with whom he remained until he became of age. Edward, Jr., drew eighteen acres of land in the land division in Woodbury in 1702, from which it appears he might have been in Woodbury for a short time; but it is evident he lived and died at Stratford, where all his children were born and where some of their descendants are yet found. He was one of the first Episcopalians in Connecticut and signed the first petition to sift out the churchmen from the congregationalists in that colony. The descendants of Edward, Jr., are now found in all parts of the United States, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, sustaining a high character for integrity and moral worth.

Edward, Jr., married Hannah, daughter of Joshua Jennings, Jr., and Mary Lyon, his wife, and had twelve children born in Stratford: (1) Jonah or Jonas, b. Nov. 5, 1700, settled at Newark, N. J. (2) Hannah, b. March 3, 1702. (3) Zachariah, b. Jan. 27, 1704. (4) SAMUEL, b. 1705. (5) Justus, b. Dec. 28, 1707. (6) Ebenezer, b. Oct. 5, 1709, d. young. (7) Sarah, b. Oct. 1711. (8) John, b. Nov. 1713. (9) Rachel, b. Dec. 4, 1715. (10) Ebenezer, b. Aug. 16, 1717. (11) Amos, b. Oct. 18, 1720. (12) Charity, b. June 6, 1723.

The following facts regarding Hannah Jennings have been gleaned from Barber's Historical Collection of Connecticut: Hannah Jennings Hinman, wife of Edward, Jr., died on her 99th birthday, July 25, 1777. Twenty years before her death, she had a premonition that she would live to be 99 years of age, but no more. She said that a venerable, comely person, whom she used to call her guardian angel and whom she had seen once before, appeared to her and asked her age. She told him, upon which he replied, "You will not live to an hundred years, but almost; you will live to be 99 and then die." She often mentioned this to her friends and was so confidently persuaded of the truth of it that she would frequently count upon how long she had to live. She arose on the morning of her 99th birthday in her usual good health. Her son, John Hinman, with whom she lived, said to her, "Well, mother, the day has arrived." She replied, "Yes and I shall die today." As she did in the afternoon of the day afore told.

CAPTAIN SAMUEL HINMAN, third son of Edward, Jr., of Stratford, was born in 1705. He was by profession a surveyor of land. He removed when a young man to Litchfield, after which he became one of the early proprietors and first settlers of Goshen, where he surveyed the town and lands for individuals. He bid off one right in Goshen on February 14, 1738, and had the 46th choice for his first division. His first survey bill was dated Dec. 7, 1738. He erected a log house there as early as 1738 or 1739, and was one of the proprietors committee for laying out most of the early divisions of land in Goshen, and was frequently called to fill the ordinary offices of the town. Although 70 years of age at the breaking out of the Revolutionary war, he served as a soldier in the Continental army. (See p. 709, History of Litchfield County.) He died at Goshen in 1784. Not known whom he married. He had ten children: (1) Lois, m. Norton. (2) Sarah, b. July 5, 1731. (3) Wilkinson, b. June 8, 1733. (4-5) Samuel and Mary, twins, b. July 26, 1736. (6) Joseph, b. March 7, 1738. (7) PHINEAS, b. March 31, 1740. (8) Ascher, b. March 13, 1742. (9) Lewis. (10) Wait, b. 1748, m. Mary Howe.

PHINEAS HINMAN, fourth son of Captain Samuel, was born at Goshen, March 31, 1740, m. Rhoda Hubbel. She d. Aug. 19, 1819, aged 78 years. He m. Ruth Colt soon afterward, and died at Goshen. He was a blacksmith by trade and lived for a time in Torrington, and then removed to Goshen to occupy a tract of land deeded to him by his father, Aug. 12, 1771, in the northeast part of Goshen. He served in the war of the Revolution, enlisting from Goshen, Dec. 23, 1776, "to march for the relief of the Continental army." (See p. 612, Connecticut in the Revolution.) He had nine children: (1) Truman. (2) ABNER. (3) Ruth, m. Edman Oviatt. (4) Olive, m. James Royce. (5) Polly, m. John Royce, Jr. (6) Grove. (7) Hannah. (8) Lucina. (9) Betsy.

CAPTAIN ABNER HINMAN, second son of Phineas, was born at Goshen, June 20, 1781. On Oct. 18, 1803, he married Lydia Beckwith (b. Dec. 7, 1784), of Goshen, daughter of Samuel Beckwith and Lois Winchell, his wife. Four children were born in Goshen: (1) Erastus, b. Oct. 2, 1804. (2) WILLIS, b. Aug. 29, 1806. (3) Chauncey, b. Jan. 5, 1808. (4) Julia Ann, b. Dec. 24, 1809, d. 1835, in Phelps, N. Y. In 1811, Capt. Abner removed to Olean, Cattaraugus County, N. Y., where two more children were born: (5) Charlotte, b. Dec. 16, 1811. (6) Lydia, b. Aug. 6, 1813, d. 1838 at Lodi Plains, Mich.

The following is related by Charles Wesley Hinman, son of Willis and grandson of Capt. Abner: "In May, 1811, Captain Abner, with his family, started for Olean, N. Y., where he had two married sisters. Much of the way was through an unbroken forest and often the roads were so uneven that his wife, Lydia, would be obliged to walk and drive while Abner held the wagon from upsetting. Even with this precaution, the wagon did upset several times. Thus they plodded on, building camp fires at night to frighten away the wild beasts, Lydia and the two younger children sleeping in the wagon while Abner and the two older slept by the fire upon the ground. On their westward march they stopped several days in Madison and Oneida Counties, New York, to visit Abner's two brothers, Grove and Truman, who owned farms, one on each side of the county line. From thence they proceeded on their way to Phelps, Ontario County, where Lydia had a brother and a sister living. After a visit at Phelps, they again took up their journey toward Olean. When within a day's journey of the latter place, Willis Thrall, brother-in-law of Abner, and his man met them with an ox team and a horse. The fresh team and horse were hitched to the wagon and Abner's wearied yoke followed on behind. Lydia and her five-year-old son, Willis, rode the remaining horse, one having died during the long and tiresome journey of nearly four hundred and fifty miles. At Olean, Captain Abner bought one hundred acres of wild land, for which he paid three hundred dollars in cash. This he improved by clearing, erecting buildings, planting fruit trees, etc. In January, 1815, he was engaged in getting stone out of Olean creek for the foundation of a church and a school house. This work took him into the water more or less, from which exposure he contracted pneumonia and died January 26, 1815." In later years, Lydia, his wife, often related to her grandchildren how Captain Abner had marched as Captain at the head of his company of militia, from Olean to Buffalo to aid in the defense of the latter place against the British in the war of 1812, before Perry had won his victory on Lake Erie. Phineas Hinman, the father of Abner, had a presentiment on the day of the latter's birth, that his son Abner would be the first of his children to die, and so it proved to be, all the others living to old age. After Abner's death, Willis Thrall bought the farm, agreeing to pay the widow, Lydia, three hundred dollars therefor, a balance of which is still unpaid. Four weeks after the death of her husband, Lydia's brother Samuel and brother-in-law, John Richards, came to Olean with two teams and moved her and her family of little ones, with their belongings, to the Richard's farm in Phelps, where she could better provide for and educate her children. In 1816 she joined the Presbyterian Church at Oaks Corners and had her children baptized. On July 9, 1818, she married Ephraim Taylor of Phelps. (Ephraim Taylor served as private in Captain John Howe's company of infantry, 108th regiment (British's) New York Militia, War of 1812.) Taylor died December 2, 1831, leaving her a widow's portion of his farm south of Newark, N. Y. Here she lived until 1877, when she went to make her home with her son, Chauncey Hinman, near Jeddo, Orleans County, N. Y., where she spent the remainder of her days, living to see descendants to the fourth generation. She died Sunday, October 10, 1880, aged nearly ninety-six years. One of her sons, Willis, himself then a man of seventy-four years, writing at the time of her death, said: "We feel that the life and death of so noble and true a woman is worthy of more than passing notice. For ninety-six years she trod the weary path of life, displaying a character and disposition that endeared her to all. In her last illness all that the highest skill and tenderest love could do, was done; but exhausted nature was too weak, and with her aged hand in that of her son's, without a struggle, without a groan, she passed away. Grandma Taylor, as she was lovingly called, had a great love for the Bible, reading it through by course each year for more than forty years. Her mind and memory were as firm and vigorous as in early life, and so lightly rested the weight of years upon her that those who saw her twenty years ago, would hardly note a change of form or feature. Her life had covered the inauguration of the first nineteen Presidents of the United States. She was five years old when Washington was first inaugurated, fifteen years old when he died, and lived to within one month of the election of Garfield.

"Her love for flowers was never more marked than during the past season. In great variety they raised their bright heads from out the leafy beds her own hands had planted. They decked the trees, hanging from cups; they climbed the fences, hung about the doorways, bidding the stranger welcome with their shining faces. They bordered the walks and bloomed around the dwelling like an Eden. Perhaps she little thought that those she cherished most would rest upon her cold heart beneath the valley's sod. Yet so it was; for as gently as the night closes the sleeping petals of the flowers, so gently did the night of death close around her, bidding her to lie down and rest and, like a tired child, she yielded and sank into that long and dreamless sleep that knows no waking."

ERASTUS HINMAN, first child of Captain Abner, b. October 2, 1804, in Goshen, Connecticut. After the death of his father in Olean, he returned to Goshen in 1816, where he lived with his grandfather, Phineas, till 1820, when he removed to Braceville, Trumbull County, Ohio. He lived there several years, taught school, owned a farm, joined the Presbyterian Church, and served as leader of the Church choir. About 1826, he married Harriet Stow. Had one son, Edward Erastus, died in infancy. Harriet, the mother, died about the same time. He then sold his property there, and moved to Geneva, Ashtabula County, Ohio, where he established a saw mill, sieve factory, etc. He eventually sold all his property, and died November 27, 1887, in Cunningham, Kansas.

WILLIS HINMAN, second son of Captain Abner, born August, 29, 1806, in Goshen, Connecticut. Removed with his parents to Olean, N. Y., in 1811. After the death of his father in 1815, Willis made his home with Willis Thrall and his wife, Lucina Thrall, the latter a sister of Captain Abner Hinman. When eighteen years of age, he went to Newark, N. Y., and learned the carpenter trade. In 1825, he married Mary Taylor, daughter of Ephriam Taylor, his stepfather. He purchased a farm adjoining that of his mother's in Phelps, where he lived about seventy years, during which time he added to his acreage and erected new buildings. From this first marriage, five children were born, all of whom, excepting ABNER, died in infancy. Mary Taylor, his wife, died January 9, 1835. On December 31, 1835, he married Olive Almyra Miller (b. 1817 in Columbia County, N. Y., and d. 1885 at Newark, N. Y.) In 1837, he was first-lieutenant in the 19th Regulars of Artillery. Willis possessed many characteristics which made it easy for him to win the confidence, esteem, and friendship of all with whom he associated. His genial and sunny temperament and loyal spirit enabled him to hold to the end that which he attained. He was a member of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Newark, and in his active years was somewhat prominent in church work. The last ten years of his life were spent in cheerfully, patiently, waiting the summons to "come home." Surrounded by every comfort the heart could wish, experiencing much satisfaction in witnessing the progress and development in life of his children, and his children's children, encompassed by their tender solicitude, he was happy in the thought that, at most, the time would not be long. His life was complete. He was ready to go. He died April 8, 1896, and was buried at Newark, N. Y.

By the second marriage he had seven children, five of whom have lived to mature age: Charles Wesley, Catherine Amanda, Alida Jane, Jasper Willis, John Francis.

ABNER HINMAN II, third son of Willis Hinman and Mary Taylor, his wife., was born July 10, 1828, in Phelps. On February 14, 1854, he married Emma J. Shaw (see Shaw and Waring records), daughter of Wilson Shaw and Emily Waring, his wife, of Carlton, N. Y. He settled in Kendall, N. Y., and engaged in farming from 1854 to 1857, then returned to Phelps and continued farming until the spring of 1863, when he returned to Kendall and engaged in the work of a stone and brick mason with his father-in-law. After the latter's death in 1869, Abner continued the business in his own name. Later three of his sons were associated with him in the work of contracting in this line—Willis, Clark, and A. Ward. He was town clerk of the town of Kendall for five years. He served several years as school trustee and also as clerk of the Union School of Kendall. For many years he was trustee and steward of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the same place, also superintendent of the Sunday School for a number of years, and class leader for twenty years. He resided at his homestead in Kendall 33 years, after which he removed to Oswego, N. Y., in November, 1897, at the instance of his son Elmer, to aid the latter in superintending his real estate interests. He now resides there. He had seven children, all sons—Willis Urban, Clarke Eugene, Albert Waring, Abner Ward, Earle Chester, Elmer Llewellyn, and Adin Vincent.

The following taken from Royal R. Hinman's work of 1856, may be of interest:

CAPTAIN ELISHA HINMAN⁴, (Captain Andrew³, Captain Titus², Sergeant Edward¹) commanded the first government ship, the "Alfred," sent out of New London at the beginning of the Revolution. In 1776, he captured an armed brig of 200 tons, laden with rum, sugar, etc., bound to Scotland, and brought her into New London; also in same year he, with Captain Shaw, carried three tons of powder into Dartmouth. In October, 1777, a prize ship laden with sugar and cotton worth £60,000, was taken by Captain Hinman of the Alfred, and Captain Thompson of the Raleigh. He also captured and took two prize ships to France in 1778, where he sold them for the benefit of the States. On the return voyage, he was unfortunately compelled to surrender the Alfred to the enemy. Being carried a prisoner to England, after a short confinement, he escaped to France, from thence returning to America. In 1779, he commanded the privateer Hancock and captured, or aided in the capture of five different vessels: The Bellona, Mulberry, Hunter, Charlotte, and the Lady

Erskine. These were afterwards sold as prizes. The last named vessel was dashingy cut off from the British fleet of 21 sails under a convoy of the Thames frigate of 36 guns, within sight of the harbor of New London. In 1779, he also commanded the Jonatus, a private cruiser carrying 29 guns. Again in the same year, he commanded the frigate Trumbull. In 1781, he was commander of the brig Marquis Lafayette and captured the brig Dispatch. In his imprisonment in England, he was brought before a magistrate for examination when the following dialogue took place:

Question. How dare you fight His Majesty's ships, you rebel of His Majesty's colonies?

Answer. I dare fight His Majesty himself, if I meet him on the high seas.

Q. Who are you, sir?

A. Elisha Hinman, sir.

Q. What's your occupation?

A. I commanded the Alfred, commissioned by the government of the United States in North America.

Q. Where were you born?

A. In Woodbury.

Q. And where (in great scorn) is Woodbury?

A. Ten miles from Darby, sir.

The magistrate laughed and said, "Give me your hand," and called for some wine.

Captain Hinman was sent to Fortune prison, from whence he afterward escaped in his shirt sleeves, in a dark, rainy night, walking ten miles in the rain. He sent word by a market woman to a Mr. Wren, in London, who sent his own carriage and servant and brought Hinman to his house where he remained three weeks, afterward escaping to France and from thence returning to America.

When Captain Hinman with Com. Thompson was ordered to the coast of France to intercept the English merchant shipping, they arrived at L'Orient and being short of men Hinman went to Paris for six weeks while they were recruiting at L'Orient. At Paris, he dined with the minister, Duke of Rouen, and with Adams and Franklin. Mrs. Lafayette called upon him and cried bitterly when enquiring after her husband who was then in America with Washington. Captain Hinman was often heard to say that Maria Antoinette and Marchioness de Lafayette were the two most beautiful ladies he had ever met.

The following is taken from "American Ancestry," Vol. X, p. 125:

ADONIRAM HINMAN⁵, (Abijah⁴, Judge Noah³, Benjamin, Sr.², Sergeant Edward¹.) relates the affair of the expedition against Ticonderoga in 1775, as follows: The leaders of the party which had previously rendezvoused at Castleton, Vt., admitted Arnold to join them and it was agreed that Allen should be the commander. We proceeded without delay and arrived in the evening at Lake Champlain, opposite Ticonderoga. Allen and Arnold crossed the lake with something less than a hundred men. After the landing there was a little misunderstanding between Allen and Arnold, as to which of the two should go in first, and it was finally agreed that they should go in together side by side. They advanced and entered the fort about daybreak. A sentry snapped his old flint lock at them, and withdrew into the fort to the parade ground. We followed and immediately came up. Allen ascertained where the commander slept, surprised him in bed and demanded in a loud voice the surrender of the fort. The commander asked "By what authority," when Allen thundered, "I demand it in the name of the great Jehovah and the Continental Congress. No resistance was made, not even a gun was fired, and the fort with its stores and about fifty prisoners, fell into our hands.

Adoniram Hinman was present at the execution of Major Andre, which took place near Tappan Village in 1780. He says: I was at that time a soldier and was stationed within a short distance of the place of execution. One of our men being somewhat of a joiner, was selected to make a coffin. At this time Andre was kept in a small stone building, and closely guarded. When the time arrived for his execution, which was between 2 and 3 p. M., a guard of about 400 men was stationed at the place of confinement. A procession was formed. In front were a number of American officers on horse back, these were followed by the wagon drawn by one horse, containing Andre's coffin. Then a large number of officers on foot with Andre among them. The procession moved to the west about a fourth of a mile up a hill, on the top of which was an open field. In this field was the gallows, made by setting two crotches in the ground, and laying a pole on the top. The wagon was drawn directly under the pole, and by the aid of a small box used as a step, Andre stepped into the hind end of the wagon, at the same time casting his eyes upon the pole over his head, and also upon the scenery by which he was surrounded. He was beautifully dressed in a British uniform, and had a head of long hair which was tied with a ribbon, and hung down behind. In a very short time after he mounted the wagon, the executioner stepped into the wagon also with a rope in his hand. Andre took the end of the rope, put it over his head, and drew it snugly to his neck, having declined any assistance from the executioner. The executioner, however, tied his arms behind his back with Andre's own handkerchief, the halter was then tied to the pole overhead and another handkerchief was tied over his eyes. The horse was suddenly started, which gave Andre a terrible jerk, but in a short time he was dead. A few moments before the horse was started an officer asked Andre if he had anything to say. He answered, "Nothing, but witness to the world that I die like a brave man."

Hinman saw Paulding, Williams and Van Wert at the execution. During the few moments that Andre stood in the wagon, the crowd was perfectly quiet, hardly a sound being heard. But as soon as the horse had started and the rope commenced moving, a soldier exclaimed, "There the poor fellow is gone."

He was ordained elder in the church and sent to Platte River as superintendent of the colony, which was managed on the co-operative plan—the industries of the colony comprising a grist mill, saw mill and farm lands. He resigned after holding the position one year and advised disorganization—the scheme not being practical. He was immediately selected as one of three to go to Northern Minnesota to select a site for colonization and for furthering the work of the church. TILLEY

Among the passengers that came over on the Mayflower in 1620, were two brothers, John and Edward Tilley. The two brothers, with their father, Paul Tilley, were members of Pastor John Robinson's Church at Leyden, Holland, and probably were among the flock that emigrated, with their pastor, from Scrooby, Nottinghamshire, England, in 1608, to Amsterdam, and from thence the following year to Leyden. Among the marriages recorded at Leyden is that of Jan Tilley and Pryntgen Van der Velde, on March 3, 1615, at Pieters kirk (opposite the house of John Robinson). Jan was accompanied by his father, Paulus Tilley, and Pryntgen by her mother, Maeijcken Tay, whose marriage is on record to Abraham Van der Velde on June 27, 1591. Jan Tilley worked at the trade of saeywereker or sea weaver. Both John and Edward were signers of the compact that was drawn up on board the Mayflower before landing. John was a member of the party that landed from the Mayflower for the purpose of exploring the country, previous to locating the colony. His family consisted of his wife, Bridget, and daughter, Elizabeth, who must have been born from previous marriage as she was nine years of age at the time of her father's marriage to Bridget Van der Velde. Both John and his wife died in the great sickness of the first winter, brought on by exposure and lack of proper food, and were buried in the "bluff by the water side"—what was later known as Coale's Hill, identical with the present terrace above the rock.

"God had sifted three kingdoms to find the wheat for this planting;

Then had sifted the wheat, as the living seed of a nation."

Edward Tilley's family consisted of wife, Ann, and Henry Samson and Humility Cooper, two children, their cousins. Both Edward and his wife died soon after landing. Humility Cooper returned to England. Henry Samson remained in the colony. On Feb. 6, 1636, he married Ann Plummer—raised a family of seven children and died Dec. 24, 1684.

ELIZABETH TILLEY, daughter of John Tilley, was born in England in 1606; went with her father's family to Holland and from there to Plymouth, Mass., on the Mayflower. She married John Howland and died at Plymouth on Dec. 21, 1687, being the last but three of the Mayflower passengers to survive.

(Tilley, Howland, Crocker, Waring, Shaw, Hinman.)

HOWLAND

JOHN HOWLAND was born in England in 1592 and was probably of the Leyden flock, as he acted as steward to Governor John Carver, and was considered one of his family up to the time of Carver's death, which occurred in planting time in 1621. He was the 13th signer of the compact and took part in the numerous exploring expeditions that were sent out. He was a prominent man in the colony, acting as assistant or deputy a greater part of the time. Owing to the small returns on their investment, the stock company, which had been formed for this undertaking, was terminated by the colonists agreeing to pay the "Merchant Adventurers" 1,800 pounds in nine equal annual instalments, beginning in 1628. In 1626 John Howland and seven other planters (William Bradford, Miles Standish, Isaac Allerton, Edward Winslow, William Brewster, John Alden, and Thomas Prince) and four London friends undertook the paying of the obligation of the colony (600 pounds) and the first six annual payments on the new basis; obtaining in return a monopoly of the foreign trade of the colony, they agreeing to bring in each year 50 pounds worth of hose and shoes to exchange with the colonists for corn at the rate of six shillings per bushel.

He took an active part in church affairs so that he "assisted in the imposition of the hands" upon Rev. John Cotton when he was ordained in 1669. He married Elizabeth, only daughter of John Tilley.

(It was long supposed that he married a daughter of Governor John Carver and the modern inscription on his monument on Burial Hill at Plymouth repeats the story, seemingly disproved by the recovery of Bradford's manuscript history, which states he married Elizabeth Tilley. Bradford's History of Plymouth Plantation, covering the period from 1608 to 1646, disappeared in 1767. A copy was obtained from England in 1855. It was supposed to have been carried away by the British on their evacuating Boston.) About ten years after the landing, the colonists began to spread out around the bay, beyond the circuit of mutual protection. John Howland and wife, Elizabeth, established their home on the bay at Rocky Nook, at the mouth of Jones's River, about a mile and a half to the north of the rock.

John Alden, the cooper from Southampton, had married Priscilla Mullins, Elizabeth Tilley's girlhood friend and companion, and built his home near the arm of the sea just west of Powder Point, which was about two miles farther to the north than Howlands. Miles Standish, the soldier-captain, settled a little farther on the north, near the shore southeast of Captain's Hill, thus attaching his military title to the neighboring eminence. Elder Prewster became Standish's neighbor a little later and lived east of the hill. Still farther on the north, Edward Winslow established his estate of Careswell, where, in later days, Daniel Webster lived and died in Marshfield. Isaac Allerton withdrew from the colony and removed to New Haven. Governor Bradford, during his last years, was almost the only one of those who came on the first ship, who still lived in the village about the Rock.

To John and Elizabeth Howland were born the following children: John, Desire, Hope, Deborah, Elizabeth, Ruth, Jabez, Joseph, Isaac, Lydia, and Hannah. (Of these, Desire married John Gorman, Hope m. John Chipman, Deborah m. John Smith, Elizabeth m. Ephraim Hicks.) John Howland died Feb. 23, 1672, being the last of the adult male passengers of the Mayflower to survive, excepting John Alden. His will was probated

March 6, 1672. He bequeathed to his wife, Elizabeth, his home at Rocky Nook, in town of Plymouth, and made her residuary legatee. WARING

"The Warings first appear in history in the first century of the Christian era as a tribe of Angles, living along the southern coast of the Baltic, and as far south as the valley of the lower Elbe. Their language was the Anglo-Saxon. In A. D. 547, some of the tribe settled in England, especially on the river Severn with Jutes, Saxons, etc., subsequently spreading over the adjoining counties, thence into Ireland, Wales, Australia, India, Cape Colony, and mostly during and since the 17th century into North America. A large part of the remainder of the tribe allied themselves in the 9th century with the clan adjoining on the south or east known as the Rugii (or Russ). Together they migrated north eastward, subjecting the Finns, Slavs, partly also the Tartars and founding A. D., 862, the Russian Empire. Gradually the Warings and the Rugii (Russ) lost to a large extent their separate identity by inter-mixing with each other and the natives and adopting the language (Slavonic) and institutions of the latter. A majority of the residue removed into other parts of Europe."

RICHARD WARING, (son of Christopher Waring) and his son Richard, Jr., both Presbyterians and a number of other persons, emigrated in 1664 on the ship Endeavor, from southern England to Boston, the entire party settling the next year at Brookhaven, Long Island, on land bought by them from the Setauket tribe of Indians, for which purchase a patent of confirmation was obtained March 7, 1666. In 1685-1686 he was tenant to 100 acres from James Lloyd, of the Manor of Queen's Village, Long Island, later owned land at Huntington, Long Island. His name and that of his descendants is variously spelled. Waren, Warren, Warring, Waring, etc. (History of Waring family.) Richard had two other sons, Michael and Edmund.

EDMUND WARING, son of Richard Waring, was born, 1673, on Long Island. He married in 1698-9 Elizabeth Bouton, daughter of John and Abigail Bouton of Norwalk, Conn. They lived at Oyster Bay, Long Island, where two sons were born, Edmund, Jr., in 1700, and Isaac in 1702. In 1704 they removed to Norwalk, Conn., residing in that part of the town now called Rowayton. His estate extended along Five Mile river and on Rhoten Hill stood his home. He also owned land in Berkshire County, Mass. There is still in existence, on Five Mile river a stone pier built by him. Both he and his son Edmund, Jr., were large subscribers to St. Paul's Episcopal church, Norwalk, founded in 1737. After removing to Norwalk the following children were born: JOHN 1704, Solomon 1707, Mary 1708, Nathan 1710, Jacob 1713, Michael, 1715, Eliakim 1717, Elizabeth 1719, Abigail 1723, Hannah 1725. Edmund Waring died at Norwalk Aug. 5, 1749. "Not a few of his descendants strongly assert that he was a near relative of General Joseph Warren (1741-1775) of Bunker Hill fame; and several of them, residing nine miles from Norwalk, possess the general's sword, wallet and letters. That the general frequently visited his (Edmund Waring's) children, and that his (Edmund Waring's) grand son, Joseph, was named after the general, are acknowledged facts. Just how close the affinity was, however, is yet to be ascertained." (Waring family History.)

JOHN WARING, third son of Edmund and Elizabeth Waring, was born at Norwalk, Conn., Dec. 31, 1704. He married Katherine, daughter of David Tuttle and wife Mary Reed. They lived on the estate of his father (Edmund Waring) at Norwalk, Conn. To them were born the following children: John, b. 1736, d. 1809. THADDEUS, b. 1744, d. 1822. Abraham, James, Hannah, Stephen, Katherine, Martha, Esther, Mary and Rebecca. (Waring family History.)

THADDEUS WARING, son of John Waring and wife Katherine Tuttle, was born July 28, 1744, either at Norwalk or Darien, Conn., probably the latter place, as his father was one of the founders of the Congregational church at Darien, in 1744, and it is quite probable that the family lived there at the time. He married Tryphena ——— (born March 6, 1748, died Aug. 22, 1851). He and his brother John removed to Southeast Dutchess County, (now Putnam) N. Y., where all of Thaddens' children were born. He served in the War of Revolution in Capt. Joel Mead's Co., Col. Henry Ludington's Regiment of Dutchess County, N. Y., militia. He also served in Capt. David Waterbury's company, same regiment. Children were Abigail, b. 1766. Phebe, b. 1768. Mary b. 1769, d. 1813. Albert, b. 1771, d. 1823. Kate, b. 1773. Esther, b. 1775, d. 1864. Hannah, b. 1777. Sarah, b. 1780. Elizabeth, b. 1783. He and his wife are buried in the cemetery at Rensselaerville, Albany County, N. Y.

CLARK WARING, youngest son of Thaddens and Tryphena Waring, was born at Southeast Putnam County, N. Y., Sept. 12, 1788. He went with his father's family to Albany County, N. Y., when they removed to that place. On Sept. 26, 1809, he married Sybil Crocker, daughter of Rev. Ephraim Crocker and wife, Polly Culver. They went to live in the extreme northwest part of the township of Berne, Albany County. (The township of Berne lies north of the township of Rensselaerville) where they lived till about 1820, when they removed to a farm in the township of Rensselaerville, about a mile south of the village by the same name. To them were born the following children: EMILY, Teressa. Harvey, b. Dec. 8, 1813, d. Feb. 4, 1834. Philena, b. July 24, 1816, d. Oct. 4, 1820. Jonathan Linn, b. May 10, 1818, d. Feb. 23, 1839. To them were born two sons, Albert Augustus, b. June 23, 1836, at Rensselaerville, N. Y., d. Oct. 26, 1865, at Elsie, Mich. (Albert A. served in the Civil war as Lieut. Co. A, 151 Regiment N. Y. Volunteer Infantry. He took part in 52 battles and skirmishes and came out of the service unscathed, being discharged June 26, 1865.) In 1836, Clark Waring and family removed to a farm in the township of Arcadia, Wayne County, N. Y., about a mile and a half north of the village of Newark, where Wilber F. was born March 17, 1843, died Dec. 17, 1865, at Carlton, N. Y. In 1853 he sold this farm and purchased one in the township of Phelps, Ontario County, adjoining the farm of Willis Hinman, about two miles south of Newark, where he lived till 1855, when he sold the place and went to live in the village of Newark. In 1856 he removed to a farm that he had purchased in the township of Kendall, Orleans County, N. Y., at which place he died Dec. 26, 1857. He served in the War of 1812, enlisting Aug. 24, 1812, in Capt. Jesse Wood's Co, 12th Regiment (Van Dalfsen's) and took part in the defense of the Canadian border against the British, being stationed for a time at Sackett's Harbor, N. Y. While in the service his company crossed the Genesee river at the present site of Rochester, at that time a small settlement of three or four houses. He was a local preacher in the Methodist Episcopal church and a person of many excellent characteristics.

EMILY WARING, oldest daughter of Clark Waring and wife, Sybil Crocker, was born Jan. 19, 1811, at Berne, N. Y. Married Wilson Shaw, Jan. 1, 1827, died Feb. 16, 1844, at Carlton, N. Y. (Waring, Shaw, Hinman.)

TERESSA WARING, second daughter of Clark Waring and wife, Sybil Crocker, was born at Berne, N. Y., May 3, 1812. On Jan. 9, 1836, at Rensselaerville, she married William Van Ess Stebbins, who was born in town of Broome, Schoharie County, N. Y., Aug. 11, 1811 (died Dec. 17, 1858). They established their home in Broom (the next township across the line in Schoharie County, west of Rensselaerville, where Sybil was born Aug. 21, 1837 (died Dec. 3, 1863). In 1838 they removed to Carlton, N. Y., where they purchased a farm. Children born in Carlton: Isaac Newton, Sarah Jane, born Sept. 8, 1841, died July 31, 1861. George Coles. Charlotte Ella. Gossman, daughter of Peter Gossman and wife, Julia Crocker. To them have been born at Carlton, N. Y.: Edith, b. 1873, d. 1878. Edna, b. 1879. On the death of his parents he purchased the interest of the other heirs of the old homestead in the township of Carlton, where he lived till fall of 1899, when he sold the farm and removed to Albion, N. Y., where he now resides. He is a man of strict integrity and of much moral worth to the community in which he has lived. He has held the several offices of the town. The compiler calls to mind an incident occurring in 1872. The Lake Ontario Shore Railroad was projected to extend from Oswego to the Niagara river. A scheme was instituted by the Company whereby the townships through which the road was to be built were to be bonded for $10,000 per mile for cost of construction. Through irregularities in the signing of the petition in the township of Carlton the Company seemingly was about to force the filing it, and accomplish their desired ends. The prevention of which was most entirely due to the initiative and integrity of Mr. Stebbins, who was prosecuted in the courts by the Company to attain their object in view. The Township of Carlton was saved the burden of paying $120,000 bond indebtedness. The road was constructed and merged into the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg, and is now a part of the New York Central System.

GEORGE COLES STEBBINS, son of William Stebbins and wife, Teresa Waring, was born in Carlton, N. Y., Feb. 25, 1846. In early life he manifested a talent for music, especially for singing. At the age of 23 he married Elma, daughter of Moses Miller of Carlton, and the same year removed to Chicago, where he pursued music as a profession. Through his ability as leader, as well as a singer, he received the position as director of music in the First Baptist church of that city, one of the largest and wealthiest churches in the west, which position he held four years. During this time he became intimately acquainted with P. P. Bliss and Ira D. Sankey, who subsequently became the famous leaders of Gospel Song, also with D. L. Moody, who afterwards was recognized as the greatest evangelist of his time. In the spring of 1872 he assisted in drilling the chorus of singers that went from Chicago to Boston to take part in the great choir of 17,000 voices and 3,000 musicians that made up the festival chorus of the Peace Jubilee, organized to celebrate the peace that had come to our country, so recently severed by the great civil conflict. He was one of those selected from the solo voices to make up the male choir, chosen to render some of the selections of the festival. In 1874 he removed to Boston with a view of pursuing the study of the voice under one of the celebrated teachers in that city. He accepted a position as director of music in the Clarendon Street Baptist church, which he held for fourteen months, when he took a like position in Tremont Temple. While visiting Mr. Moody in Northfield, Mass., in the summer of 1876, he was induced by the former to give up his work in Boston and become associated with him and Mr. Sankey in their evangelistic work. He was sent to Chicago to organize a choir of 800 voices for the meetings they were to hold that autumn. From that time until Mr. Moody's death nearly twenty-five years afterwards, Mr. Stebbins continued his association with them, visiting Great Britain several times, as well as assisting in the work in the principal cities of our own country. During these years he was associated at different times with Dr. George F. Pentecost and Major D. W. Whittle. In the autumn of 1890, with his wife and son, G. Waring Stebbins, who was coming to the front as a vocalist and musician, Mr. Stebbins went with Dr. Pentecost to spend the winter in India in evangelistic work. Before returning to America they gave services of song in many of the larger cities of that country, also in Egypt and Palestine, and in Naples, Rome, Paris, and London. In addition to his evangelistic work he has conducted the singing in many of the state and national religious conventions, notably, some of the National Christian Endeavor Conventions, on one occasion there being 30,000 and on another 50,000 delegates in attendance. In 1900 he conducted the music in the Ecumenical Missionary Conference, held in New York City, which was the largest and most representative body of the kind ever held, there being delegates from many of the European countries, as well as the great missionary fields of the world. As much as his voice has been heard and appreciated throughout the world, he is best known by the music he has written. He early manifested a talent for composition of no mean order and at the time he became associated with Moody and Sankey he began writing for the books known as "Gospel Hymns," of which he became associate editor with Ira D. Sankey and James McGranahan. He was also associate editor of various hymn books that followed this series, besides being sole editor of two more recent hymn books. His work as a writer of this class of music is recognized by the best critics as belonging to the highest order, not a few of his productions being considered as classics of their kind, and many of them attaining great popularity, as, for instance, "Evening Prayer," "The Green Hill," "In the Secret of His Presence," "The Homeland," "Saved by Grace," etc. The record of his life work would not be complete without some recognition of the great aid his wife has been to him in his public work. In addition to her attractive personality, she possesses a rich and sympathetic contralto voice, which, blending perfectly with his, has added greatly to the effectiveness and impressiveness of his singing. They reside at No. 19 Verona Place, Brooklyn, N. Y.

As a mark of success in the business which he has followed, that of architect and builder, numerous public buildings in Columbia and neighboring towns stand as monuments to his initiative and enterprise. Not a few have known his quiet philanthropy, notwithstanding the entire lack of egotism as a characteristic in his nature. While the greater portion of Columbia was destroyed by Sherman's forces, when they halted in that city on their march north from Savannah.
